The Washington Post Names AIR Communities a 2021 Top Workplace Award Winner

Washington, June 30, 2021 – Apartment Income REIT Corp. (known as AIR Communities) has been awarded a Top Workplaces 2021 honor by The Washington Post. Selection is based solely on team member feedback gathered through an anonymous third-party survey administered by research partner Energage, LLC, which measured several aspects of workplace culture, including alignment, execution, and connection. This year's honorees include government contractors, real estate companies, professional and business services, law firms and tech companies.

"Now in its eighth year, The Post's Top Workplaces list continues to highlight the companies in the Washington-area that are leaders in company satisfaction and engagement," said Washington Post Top Workplaces editor Dion Haynes. "Throughout the past 15 months, these companies have had to make quick decisions in order to keep their employees safe while also balancing productivity and efficiency, and their employees have taken note of this great work."

"Being named a Washington Post Top Workplace is both an honor and a measure of our team's commitment to living AIR's mission, vision and values," said AIR Area Vice President Kevin Mosher. "There are many things that set an AIR community apart, but it's our talented team that truly makes the difference."

In addition to high marks from the Washington Post Top Workplace survey, AIR's nationwide team engagement score reached a record high in 2020 of 4.3 out of 5.

The Washington Post hosted a virtual awards ceremony on Thursday, June 17 to recognize the top-ranked companies. For more about The Washington Post's Top Workplaces and to see the full list of this year's honorees, visit the Top Workplace website.
