Ferguson earns 2024 Gold Bell Seal for Workplace Mental Health

2024-08-01

Ferguson has been awarded a 2024 Gold Bell Seal for Workplace Mental Health by Mental Health America (MHA).

“This recognition highlights our dedication to fostering a supportive and healthy environment,” explained Allison Stirrup, Chief Human Resources Officer at Ferguson. “We understand the significance of mental health, both in and out of the workplace, and are committed to ensuring our associates have the resources they need to thrive."

The Bell Seal is a first-of-its-kind workplace mental health certification that recognizes employers who are making substantial progress in promoting mental health at work. Only one in four employers met the rigorous standards for Bell Seal certification, and we are proud to be among them.

Our gold certification was achieved following a thorough assessment of our policies and practices across four key areas: workplace culture, benefits, compliance and wellness programs. This includes our extensive training and development opportunities and our mental health-friendly benefits packages.

Bell Seal recipients are considered the nation’s top employers that demonstrate a strong commitment to mental health for their workers, consumers, clients and communities. We are honored to be acknowledged for our efforts to enhance worker mental health outcomes and experiences.
