T/R Systems Secures Line Of Credit From Silicon Valley Bank

$2 Million Credit Facility to Support Advancement of Digital Document Production

Norcross, GA and Santa Clara, CA — February 12, 2003 — T/R Systems, Inc. (TRSI), a leader in developing innovative solutions for the management and production of digital documents, and Silicon Valley Bank (SVB), a subsidiary of Silicon Valley Bancshares (SIVB), announced today that SVB extended a $2 million line of credit to T/R Systems. The credit facility will be used as additional working capital in support of T/R Systems' growth objectives.

"Silicon Valley Bank's continued relationship with T/R Systems is a valued endorsement of our strategies and our financial strength," said Lyle Newkirk, Senior Vice President and Chief Financial Officer of T/R Systems. "Although we have no anticipated need, this credit facility gives us added flexibility for growth in a challenging economic environment."

"It's exciting to work with a technology company like T/R Systems that is on the leading edge of its industry and is helping a variety of customers worldwide to alter the way they do business," said Alan Spurgin, senior vice president, Silicon Valley Bank. "Through our ongoing relationship with T/R Systems, we are able to provide financing of this nature in addition to our full range of banking products and services specifically tailored for up-and-coming as well as established technology companies."

About T/R Systems
T/R Systems (www.trsystems.com) provides the printing and publishing industry with an integrated software suite that transforms digital copiers and printers into powerful, scalable print-on-demand systems. Its solutions turn complex document production tasks into efficient automated business processes.

T/R Systems solutions are used by a broad spectrum of customers, including corporations, colleges and universities, facilities managers and print-for-pay service providers. Despite the seemingly different requirements of each of these groups, the one constant is their desire to provide effective and efficient document production services to their customers.
