

Maryland's Harford County Selects Tyler Technologies' EnerGov Solution

Harford County to use EnerGov software to improve management of critical business data

DALLAS – Jan. 17, 2013 – Tyler Technologies, Inc. (NYSE: TYL) has signed a contract with Harford County, Md., to implement Tyler's EnerGov planning, permitting and licensing solution. EnerGov will assist multiple Harford County agencies with tracking and managing critical government data related to business licensing, land management, permitting processes and code enforcement. The agreement includes related professional services, training and support.

"Technology such as EnerGov will enhance the efficiency and effectiveness of Harford County government to help our citizens better access important information, processes and services," said County Executive David R. Craig.

Tyler's EnerGov software, a Web-based automation platform, will manage an expansive array of government and citizen service functions at Harford County while reducing use of disparate systems and improving efficiencies within the county. Harford County has an approximate population of 245,000 and is part of the Baltimore-Washington Metropolitan Area.
