Silas currently manages Tyler's Community Readiness solution. This comprehensive solution bridges the gap between the jail and the community by connecting residents in jails with community organizations. These organizations assist residents in gaining an education, finding a job, and locating a place to live once they are released from jail.

"Reducing recidivism is more than a goal, it is a need as the U.S. continues to lead the world in repeat offenders. This impacts the individual, their families, communities, and local economies," said Silas Deane III, manager of Community Readiness. "I'm proud to receive national recognition for Community Readiness, which is rapidly expanding to multiple correctional facilities including in Nashville, Atlanta, and Memphis. Former residents are already experiencing benefits from the solution in finding homes, jobs, and resources. This is just the beginning, and we're excited about the future."

The NACRJ's mission is to advance community and restorative justice as a social movement by serving people and organizations committed to building community and addressing harm. NACRJ provides guidance and support to establish high quality practices with fidelity to restorative principles.
