SoloMio Corporation Receives Equipment Financing and Line of Credit from Silicon Valley Bank

Austin, TX -- June 21, 2001 -- Silicon Valley Bank (the "Bank"), a wholly owned subsidiary of Silicon Valley Bancshares, announced it provided Austin-based SoloMio Corporation with a $1 million equipment financing facility and a $500,000 line of credit.

SoloMio, a manufacturer of software for wireless telecommunications, is a new client to the Bank.

"Our emphasis is on developing compelling new applications that define the character of next generation wireless networks. SoloMio is gaining incredible traction in the marketplace, and growing rapidly to meet the needs of our customers," said Richard Schwartz, president and chief executive officer of SoloMio. "Our partnership with Silicon Valley Bank helps us maintain a strong financial position and have the resources to grow a global company in a fiscally responsible manner."

"SoloMio is developing software for the rapidly growing wireless telecommunications industry, and selling to some of the most respected wireless network operators in Europe," said Stuart Edwards, senior relationship manager in the Bank's Austin office. "This relationship compliments our high technology portfolio, and we look forward to working with SoloMio now and in the future."

About SoloMio Corporation
