Bluecurrent Receives Credit Facility From Silicon Valley Bank

Austin, TX -- October 2, 2001 -- Silicon Valley Bank (the "Bank"), a wholly owned subsidiary of Silicon Valley Bancshares, announced it provided Bluecurrent, LLC with a $5 million credit facility.

Austin, Texas-based Bluecurrent, the leading solutions provider of lifecycle management services for technology assets, will use the facility to replace another line of credit and to finance working capital growth.

"Silicon Valley Bank has given us the financial flexibility to continue to pursue our strategic objectives," said Tony Bostwick, chief financial officer of Bluecurrent. "We found Silicon Valley Bank to be the most accommodating of most lending institutions and understands our business needs. We look forward to continuing a long relationship."

"Bluecurrent has an outstanding product that allows large corporations to manage their technology assets more effectively and efficiently," said Doug Mangum, Silicon Valley Bank's Southwest division manager. "The facility allows for greater flexibility and availability than their previous bank was willing to provide."
