According to Gartner, “Transportation management systems help supply chain leaders manage disruptions and mitigate risks. With needs changing and the TMS market expanding in size, the vendor landscape becomes more crowded and complex. Supply chain technology leaders must use this research to evaluate the TMS market.”

With E2open, shippers can simplify and optimize their logistics management for all modes and regions in a single application for planning, carrier procurement, execution, tracking, and settlement. The connected global transportation ecosystem provides easy collaboration and access to additional capacity, along with improved reach and growth opportunities. In addition, E2open’s end-to-end platform enables integration with cross-functional applications, for supply chain planning and collaboration, global trade management, and complete visibility of goods in motion.

“Transportation management continues to be at the forefront of company operations and digital supply chain transformation, critical to the efficient flow of goods in our global economy,” said Pawan Joshi, E2open’s executive vice president of product management and strategy. “E2open provides the broadest carrier coverage across all modes, and re-usable connections to forwarders, 3PLs and other logistics service providers to help orchestrate the needs in simple and complex scenarios. Also, adjacent supply chain applications help ensure transportation decisions are proactive and synchronized with other areas of the supply chain. This combination enables companies to remain compliant, agile, and resilient in an ever-changing environment. In addition, E2open’s recent investments, including the acquisitions of BluJay and Logistyx, add new capabilities such as fleet management, last-mile delivery, rail, and expanded e-commerce parcel shipping for an even more robust TMS to serve shippers’ needs. E2open is pleased to be recognized for our Ability to Execute and Completeness of Vision.”
